

> Lean Consulting Services

- Factory Planning and Production Planning
- Lean Logistics Planning
- Improving Production Efficiency
- Improving Office Efficiency
- Successful Change Management

> Company

> Contact Us

Newsletter 05/2010

New Certification Standards

---

A wave of new industry standards has recently been released to help companies optimize and streamline their project management capabilities, and ensure quality across the board. For Germany, these include DIN 69901 (project management), DIN31000 (risk management), and Critical Chain PM PRINCE (Projects in Critical Environment.) To small and mid-sized suppliers, these certifications will prove essential, both in enhancing internal standards and in determining overall business success – as manufacturers will consider them must-have criteria for long-term partnerships.

Our extensive work with large manufacturers has showed that they expect their suppliers to have a quality system in place, and to deliver all goods in time and budget, and according to predefined quality metrics. Suppliers who earned these new certifications will therefore have a major edge over their competition. But as a small or mid-size supplier, how can you prepare to effectively implement them in your own environment, especially if you are here in the US and you are trying to sell to a German OEM? For more information read on, and/or contact us at contactICA@ingenics.com or calling 678-528-7042.

When it comes to increasing efficiencies in project management, consider systematic optimization techniques, just as you would in other parts of your business. First, analyze the status quo and define goals, then develop a guide to achieving these goals using the new standards to direct each step of the way.

AWARD:

Top Consultant / Management consultant

> Lean Consulting Services

- Factory Planning and Production Planning
- Lean Logistics Planning
- Improving Production Efficiency
- Improving Office Efficiency
- Successful Change Management

> Company

> Contact Us

Newsletter 05/2010

In doing so, focus not only on internal structures but also on your team, and make sure everyone is on board. And of course, if you need help either in taking full advantage of new tools, or in building professional skills across both managers and employees call on us. InGenics is available to help you with industry insight and professional change management to get the most out of the new certifications.

---

AWARD:
Top Consultant / Management consultant